“ Hey Ashley, I’m sorry it took me so long to put my thoughts together and start talking about all the emotions since you’ve been gone. I’ve accepted that I’ll never have the “right” or “perfect” words and that ultimately things go unsaid so I’m starting here.

It’s crazy to think about where we started as kids. Even though you’re technically younger, I don’t ever remember a time before you existed. You weren’t my sister technically, but we were together often enough during those formative. Not having a sibling myself yet, you were the closest I had to one so you might as well have been my half-sister, stepsister or whatever you wanna call it. I remember us having this loving relationship that also had the typical competitiveness that comes with sisters. I always looked up to you and admired the things I saw in you that I didn’t see in myself. You were the beautiful, funny, exciting, energetic and fun kid. People wanted to be around you and that was clear with how many friends you had. I got invited to sleepovers of yours and they were the only ones I went to as a child so they meant so much to me but they were just a normal part of your life because people wanted to spend time with you.

I’m sorry and I’m angry about the people who made you feel otherwise. Your strengths and great qualities were always so obvious to me.

Years went by and as we became teens, we didn’t have as many opportunities to see each other. When we did, we picked up right where we left off. I still remember those few times I’d see you because I reached out to make plans, not because we had a family event. You always seemed so hopeful and so ready to do great things. You had good dreams that would have helped your community and given you a purpose that you were meant to fill. I still remember when you told me you were pregnant with Anna. We were so excited for your little girl and I tried to convince you to come move up North with me and enroll in school so you could have all the resources you’d need. The reasons that didn’t work out don’t matter, I’m sad it kept me from getting more time with you and her. I always thought we’d have more time which is of course the foolishness we carry as humans. It's just so frustrating that you were so young and you got so few chances to make mistakes and try again to get it right.

I hope you know I'll do my best to be here for Anna however she needs me. I see so much of you in her and I'm glad a small part of you gets to live on. I'm also glad she can grow into her own person and she has opportunities you didn't. She'll learn things you didn't get a chance to and be stronger for it.

Take care of Oma for us while you're up there and please teach her how to pronounce Chloe's name. She was always so proud you named Anna after her mother and that it was a name she knew well.

“ Today I can sense in my sister Capri's voice how much she misses her daughter Ashley.

The depths of Love Capri has for Ashley are immeasurable.

Capri talks of Ashley to me everyday on many occasions I wish so badly I could say or do something to take away her pain but only God can do that in time.

I would like to express to all of you out there who know and love Capri and Ashley and Anna as I do to let them all know how much we love and support them

Love 💕💕 Helen

“ I can not believe this! I am Ashley's little brother. Michael Sessoms was my father. And nobody tried to reach out and tell me anything. Ashley I loved you and wanted nothing but the best for you. I hate that you are gone and the fact that you passed away on my birthday of all days hurts more than words can describe. Rip sis. 💔😭

“ Ashley, I love and miss you so very much. This picture was taken Thanksgiving morning. Sadly there was an empty place at the table you would have sat at. This beautiful picture is one of God's beautiful portraits and I know you are resting in peace seeing all the beauty. Everything beautiful reminds me of you. Mommy loves you so much my beautiful Angel.

“ I have so many things I want to say & can't find the words. My entire child hood & memories are you. This seems so unreal to me & I really can't process it. All the laughs, inside jokes, & memories just keep flashing in my head. You were my absolute best friend & I will never forget you or the memories we have. I hope you are at peace now Ash. I love you. ❤️
