“ Barnette was my cousin, but more like a brother. When we were younger he lived with his grandma in the mountains so I didn't real become clean secto him until we were grown. So if you want to say I was his only sister and we both knew that. Once grown he was my ride or die. I love and miss him. But the best thing that could ever happen to him was meeting his wife Cheryl.. now that was a true love story. I appreciated her then and now bc she loved him unconditionally and she's truly an angel. And I want to thank her for making MY brother so happy.. but I know that Barnette is now with his family in heaven but I surely do miss our hours of conversations on the phone. Your missed Barnette, I love you and miss you.

“ Barnette was my oldest brother. Growing up, we were like two peas in a pod. I was his little sister and he always let everybody know. He always took up for me and I looked up to him. Everyone else had the big purple dinosaur, Barney, but I had my brother, Barney!

When we were older kids, he moved away with my Grandmother to the Mountains of NC. Although, we didn't get to see each other as much, every time I went for a visit, he was still my big brother as if nothing changed.

I remember playing video games, Top Gear was his favorite. We would race cars all night. He loved to play the "Claw machine" which were quite popular back in the day. He taught me how to actually win. To this day, every time I see a machine, I have to play.

As we become adults, our lives went down different paths. I grew up and had my own family. He was still the wild care-free person he always was. Although we did not have as much contact as we did when we were little, he was still my brother. The visits were far and few between, but my children knew they had an Uncle Barnette.

I was very happy for him when he moved to California to marry his wife Cheryl. It seemed he finally found the happiness he had searched for so long in life.

I truly hate he passed away so young, but I take comfort in knowing the past 7-8 years were the happiest of his life. He met the woman of his dreams, got to help her raise her son, and he got to meet his biological father and family he never knew he had.

For his other family out there, you are in our thoughts and prayers during this difficult time.

May you rest in peace, Barney! You will be greatly missed.
