“ I'm so graceful that I had the pleasure of meeting a person that was so nice, so sweet all the time. I wish I could have been there to say my goodbye but when something or someone touches my heart so deep, it's hard for me. This give me the chance to talk to you with no one being around, just me and you, Erma. Eight years old I met a wonderful person who introduce me to you and we know who that person is, right lol. Erma, you have always treated me like family and the image that I have of you and that will stay with me until I die, is that smile. I remember that day I was over your sister house and you told me that the cancer had came back. I'm sitting there, fighting back tears, listening to you and the entire time, you have this smile on your face. How can this person, who has been through breast cancer before and now have to go through chemo treatment all over again, have a smile on their face...one word, GOD. We know God doesn't make any mistake. We also know God has some of his Angel here on earth. After being on earth for awhile, God will call his Angels to come home. It was time for this Angel to go home. Erma, you have done all you can do, as we say...job well done!!! I'm going to miss you a lot but I will always carry that image of you...smiling!!! Ok, my last thing to you, while you're sitting up there in heaven, looking down on us, if you see me doing something I'm not suppose to be doing, tap me on my shoulder lol. Now these tears want to come down so I better stop here. I thank God for allowing me to meet a wonderful woman. I will cherish the numerous conversation we had. Thank you for being YOU. R.I.P, my family for Life!!!!
