“ Mike i had the opportunity to meet your mother for the first time years ago back in the 60's. And she was one of the most gentle souls that I had ever met. I know that her passing may seem to be one of those things you may never get over. And though you never "get over it", you might say, you do come to a point where you learn to look at the lost in a different way. With faith you learn to remember the good times when she put a smile on your face, when only Mamma's touch could calm you down and when only she could make everything alright. And the peace that will makes all of this OK is a gift of God. Like many others I've been down this road too and anyone who is born into this world will go down it someday. So I say to you and your family mourn for a little while then get up and remember life is for the living.
