“ I remember one day during a car ride taking you to a chemotherapy appointment. We were on the interstate, I was driving and you were in the passenger seat. We were having a casual conversation about how good your chemo was going and then about how I just got raise and accepted to ODU. You all of a sudden started talking about how proud you are of each three of your kids. You started crying, then I started crying. The rest of the ride to the treatment center was so sentimental LOL. I totally get my emotional qualities from you. You kept saying how your kids are all grown up and that we're not babies anymore. You said even my baby girl lisa is all grown up and in middle school now. And how I was graduating from the same HS as you with honors (like you). You said Mikey grew up to be so handsome and respectful to people including women as you wanted him to be. That's when I started crying more and said "Look at the great mother that we have to guide us". I know you will always be there along our side to guide each one of our journey's in life. YOU WILL ALWAYS BE MISSED, MOM. YOU WILL NEVER BE FORGOTTEN.
